The Botanical Society of America (BSA) is a professional society whose objectives are to sustain and provide improved formal and informal education about plants; encourage basic plant research; provide expertise, direction, and position statements concerning plants and ecosystems; and foster communication within the professional botanical community, and between botanists and the rest of humankind through publications, meetings, and committees.

The BSA is the home for ALL botanists and plant scientists and supports the breadth and diversity of botanical research and education. We are the leading Society dedicated to botany and its future. Its main area of expertise is in supporting professional botanists and their students, but it also encourages and provides special dues categories for our K-12 teachers, community college educators, affiliated professionals and amateurs who can benefit from what the BSA has to offer.

American Journal of Botany

The American Journal of Botany (AJB) is the flagship journal of the Botanical Society of America (BSA). Established in 1914, the AJB publishes peer-reviewed, innovative, significant research of interest to a wide audience of plant scientists in all areas of plant biology (structure, function, development, diversity, genetics, evolution, systematics), all levels of organization (molecular to ecosystem), and all plant groups and allied organisms (cyanobacteria, algae, fungi, and lichens). The electronic version of the journal (www.amjbot.org) receives over 850,000 web visits each month.
